Art Attracts Gloucester Folk

GLOUCESTER, MASS., Aug. 2.—On Tues- | forward to Judge Moore's private show, av afternoon society from all along which is always a notable event, some day afternoon society from all along the North Shore came to view the portrait which John Singer Sargent had finished and presented to the old Sargent-Murray-Gilman house in Gloucester. The portrait is of Prof. Charles Sprage Sargent, noted naturalist of Harvard University, a cousin of the artist, and is to hang in the Sar-gent room of the old house. Another feature of interest in connection with the old house was the opening on the same afternoon of the art gallery, which occupies the four large rooms on the gave a dinner party cond floor. The gallery, organized and rected by Grace Ross Horne of Bos-
